City Begins Week-Long Earth Day Celebration

By: NY1 News

The city is celebrating Earth Day a little early, with events all week long.

The festivities kicked off Monday at Grand Central Terminal with an exhibit that features new sustainable technology, clothing, and makeup.

There is also a self-guided tour of urban wildlife that you can listen to while riding the Number 7 subway line.

Events are being held all week long across the five boroughs, including concerts and an outdoor fair featuring more than 100 organizations.

"We have some really exciting events planned, significantly bigger than what we normally do, we're doing a week-long event here in Grand Central Terminal that's focusing in on sort of technology for the future," said Earth Day New York Director Pamela Lippe.

Thursday marks the 40th anniversary of Earth Day.
